A 5% Chance

You may have heard me talking the other day about the funny moment I had several months ago when we found out what the “due date” was for our son. I had looked up online to see how likely it would be that he would be born on that actual date. I knew that the odds would be low, but I didn’t expect them to be as low as five percent! To me, that date became pretty insignificant from there on out during the pregnancy because I knew that the “odds” were not stacked in favor of the due date.

That did, however, get me thinking about James 4:13-17. It’s the passage where James warns us against the presumption of assuming that “today or tomorrow we will go to this or that place, spend a year there, carry on business and make money.” James reminds us that life is far less in our control than we think, and we don’t even know what will happen tomorrow—let alone in a year. After all, we are “a mist that appears for a little while and then vanishes.”

As humans, we like to feel like we are in control of the future. We often turn to math in order to find some sense of stability. We like to know that the average person lives to X age, the average return of the stock market is Y percent, the average person recovers from COVID in Z days, and on we could go.

Now, hear me out: I am actually fascinated by those kinds of statistics and think they provide a lot of value. It is helpful to be able to make educated plans. At the same time, it is healthy to remind ourselves that all of those statistics are ultimately powerless. The average age is not able to guarantee that you or I live to that age, the average market return in the past can’t guarantee future returns, the average recovery time for an illness can’t guarantee that you or I will recover in that timeframe.

In other words, despite how much we might try to get life under our control James insists that our existence is a lot more uncertain than we like to think. And this should prompt a great deal of humility within us.

The great news, however, is that while our existence is more uncertain that we like to think—i.e., it is beyond our control—our existence is also more certain than we could ever imagine. We may not know what tomorrow holds, or even if we will be alive tomorrow, but we do know that God will guard and save his children.

We are gathered here today to worship God, acknowledging the uncertainties of life from our perspective while rejoicing in the certainties of life from God’s perspective. May we proceed from this place with humility and hope in light of the presence of God in our lives!

Staying in Touch with YOUTH

Loving Like Jesus Did

"You don't love someone because they're perfect, you love them in spite of the fact that they're not."—Jodi Picoult. Isn't this the type of love that the Father and Son have for us? In spite of our failings, flaws, and inconsistencies in our spiritual walk, Heaven still loves us! What do you think the world would be like if you and I loved like Jesus? How much better would our lives be if we could have that same type of affection for all men? So, we ask, "What does it mean to love like Jesus?"

If I am to love like the Lord, it means that I have learned to think of others before I think of myself (Phil. 2:1-8) and that I have Left behind a life of selfishness and self-righteousness (Gal. 6:3). It means that I relish the Opportunities to lift a burden (Gal. 6:1,2), dry a tear (2 Cor. 1:3,4) and demonstrate that God's grace is more than sufficient to help me triumph over my foes, that I will offer all that I have to glorify the Lord, and be an encourager to my fellow Christians. When I love like the Savior, it means that I "Vote" for all things holy, that I love my neighbor as myself (Matt. 22:39) and that I will not say or do those things which might be a stumbling block to others. Finally, when I show my affection in the way that Jesus did, I will daily Exhibit my patience, extend my grace, and empty my heart of bitterness toward those who have hurt my feelings, bruised my ego, and who have endeavored to ruin my day with far from perfect actions, bitter attitudes and spiteful and cutting words.

Why do I want to love as Jesus loved? The answer is very simple: "Beloved, if God loved us, we also ought to love one another" (1 Jn. 4:7-11).

Lesson 5 Joseph- His Brothers, Egyptian Captivity

Memory Verse:

"God is our refuge and strength, always ready to help in times of trouble." Psalms 46:1

In this lesson, your child will learn about Jacob and his sons. Jacob's favorite son was Joseph which made all of the other brothers very jealous. The brothers decided to get rid of their brother by throwing him into an empty well. Joseph was also known for being a dreamer. God gave him the ability to understand and interpret dreams.
